WHAT OF THE LIFE BEYOND THE GRAVE

Can the memories and affections of earth be continued and furthered in the life beyond the grave? Will the associations, relationships and ties which have, in the blessing of Christian environment, done so much to make our earthly life a pleasant and helpful one, be continued in the next world? These questions, which mean so much to those who have lost members of the family circle or friends made dear in the associations of years, will form the basis of this concluding sermon in the First Presbyterian church of the series on "Life Beyond the Grave." There will be special music.

RIO GRANDE ROAD IS STORING COAL

Heavy Shipments to Ogden to Follow 75 Carloads Which Arrived Within Last 48 Hours—5,000 Tons to be Stored.

Seventy-five cars of coal have been received at Ogden over the Rio Grande road during the last forty-eight hours, and this is the advance shipment of the coming winter's supply of railroad fuel to be brought to this city. The management of the Rio Grande system has ordered that five thousand tons of coal be assembled in this city for the exclusive use of that company during the next year, and General Superintendent D.

ley will have it stored between the Rio Grande road house and coach tracks between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, west of Pacific avenue, as early as possible.

The coal comes from Castle Gate, Scofield and the Clear Creek mines. The purpose of the company is to put the railroad coal out of the way as early as possible in order that nothing may interfere with the shipment of commercial coal during the fall and winter months.

ERECTING A MODEL STABLE

Manager Ernest Stone of the American Linen Supply company's plant in Ogden has advertised for bids for the construction of a stable which, when completed will be one of the finest in the city. The structure will be of white brick, fifty feet by eighty feet. It will be two stories, with ample quarters for fourteen horses and fourteen wagons. The structure will be sanitary throughout and provided with hot and cold water.

Every possible convenience will be provided and every precaution taken to make it fireproof. Work on the structure will begin within a week.

"AS THE SUN WENT DOWN."

(From the Evening Telegram.) If you have lived in the west you will appreciate "As the Sun Went Down." If you see the play in the east it will make you want to visit a real western mining camp where they "do things."

Replete with witty and wholesome lines, "As the Sun Went Down" deals with a real mining camp and real western characters. There is the saloon, "The Miners' Paradise," with the postoffice right up next to the bar. And there's a duel—a duel with a man and a woman as the principals. There's a parson, too, who comes to the mountains for his health. You learn to love him. There are the bad men of the camp, who turn good, almost. Faro Bill is there. Now, Faro Bill is a professional gambler, but you're his friend the minute he enters that old saloon. He's big, he's powerful, and he wants every one to get a square deal. You learn to think "a heap" of him before the play is fairly started. And then there's Colonel Billy, the best and biggest hearted woman in the camp. Maybe she has been bad, but she wants to make an honest start. Every one is for Colonel Billy. She likes Faro Bill and the young parson, and she can shoot straight every time.

These are some of the characters that make "As the Sun Went Down" entertaining. The play is much better than expected. The cast is noticeably well selected. The characters are a whole lot more "real" than one sees in many plays. As for the stage pictures, they are commensurate with the lines of the piece, many of which you will recall now and then and kind to say to yourself, "I'd like to see that play again."

Estha Williams as Colonel Billy is all that could be desired. Her efforts as "the" woman of the camp are very well done. Edwin Walter plays the part of Faro Bill in a way that demonstrates a true understanding of the role. Faro Bill looks like he would be a good fellow to meet most anywhere, especially if you were in trouble. He shares his big heart with every one who needs help, just as Colonel Billy does.

Flora Ryan makes a dear little Sal Sue, who is always present with a volley of original poetry. She is good looking from the soles of her little black slippers up to the very top of her brown curly head.

Victory Bateman appeared in the role of Mabel Morton, an actress. Miss Bateman was the second leading woman at the Grand theater in Salt Lake City, and was with the Daniel Frawley stock company here years ago. Her presence as one of the persons of the play made the piece more enjoyable to many of her old friends in the audience.

One of the best characters in the piece is played by R. F. Sullivan as Gln Mill Jack. His "makeup" is excellent and he plays the part of the old saloon keeper just as one sees it enacted in western life every once in a while.

The others of the company play their parts satisfactorily.

This play will be seen at the new Ogden theater Monday evening, May 2nd. Popular prices.

"The Red Mill"

An attraction that will surely arouse the keenest interest here will be the presentation of the new Blossom and Herbert comic opera, "The Red Mill," by Martin & Emery Co.'s organization, which will be seen at the Ogden Theater, on Saturday, May 7. With a record of one entire year on Broadway, New York City, at the Knickerbocker Theater, and three months each in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, "The Red Mill" stands out as the most popular musical hit of the past three seasons and one that will prove popular for many seasons to come, possessing all the elements of an enduring success both in story and music. "The Red Mill" marks the nineteenth complete musical play by Victor Herbert, every one of which has scored an undeniable success and have proved the vehicles for most of the distinguished musical stars of the present day. Henry Blossom, the author of the book and lyrics, has already come to the front place as the American Gilbert, each of his writings having, like Herbert, proved immensely successful.

Starting with "Checkers," his first and only dramatic writing, he rapidly followed with "The Yankee Consul," "Mlle. Modiste," "The Prima Donna," and "The Red Mill." "The Red Mill" Messrs. Blossom and Herbert have worked with such intelligence that the former has succeeded in telling the adventures of a frisky pair of Americans who are "dolts" Europe for the first time, but who strike a snag in one of the small villages of Holland when their money gives out, and the most amusing complications follow, lead them to assume all kinds of disguises. The music of Herbert is of the whistle-kind and satisfies not only music lovers alone, but the masses to whom song is one of the greatest delights.

The company of sixty people has been carefully selected and embraces a cast of rare individuality, particularly the six little boys and girls who impersonate the Dutch Kiddlees.
